12	My son has fecal incontinence as I know others with neurodevelopmental disorders also do, as he is also high functioning I feel this has also been a barrier to his diagnosis as the focus has continually been on the incontinence instead. My son first accessed CAMHS 4 years ago however he has only just had an assessment as we couldn't make one appointment date and were put right back to the beginning of the waiting list.

15	It should be written in the guidance.

18	I think ASD is a very complex condition and it can easily be overlooked if you are not on the extreme end of the spectrum, I believe that the current waiting system is inadequate my son is almost 11 now and needed help far sooner. I think that the Bill will focus public awareness and ensure that children get diagnosed far sooner.
